

Training For Camps and Youth Service Providers: Running Games for Kids in the Age of Social Distancing

Learn active and fun games your staff can use to keep youth engaged in any space while social distancing.

Asphalt Green is offering remote training and consultation to accompany the free digital resources we have created to promote socially distanced play. Your staff will learn new tools and techniques to make use of time while transitioning from one activity to another, before dismissal, time waiting in line, and more.

REMOTE TRAINING TOPICS COVER:

- How, when, and where your staff can implement safe, socially distanced play for kids of all ages
- Activities for early arrival and late dismissal
- How to engage participants of all ages during quiet times (waiting in line, transitioning to and from activities, etc.)
- Strategies to inspire and motivate kids to actively participate
- How to work with a variety of personalities and develop conflict-resolution strategies
- Ways to maximize your camp space for games (indoor and outdoor)
- Team-building games and strategies for leadership staff

FREE DIGITAL RESOURCES:

- Downloadable PDFs with instructions for how to set up, explain, and modify games that allow for social distancing and do not require shared equipment
- Instructional videos that provide additional tips and tricks for setting up and leading games
- How-to videos on topics including attention signals, transition strategies, conflict resolution, and more!

WHY TRUST ASPHALT GREEN?

We run New York City's proven recess program that serves 30,000 kids annually and one of the most popular summer day camp programs in New York City.

To learn more about our training and consultation services, contact communityprograms@asphaltgreen.org